Why was the Privacy Act passed?

Roots of the Privacy Act of 1974 can be traced as far back as 1965 when hearings were held by the House of Representatives Special Subcommittee on Invasion of Privacy. The Privacy Act was created in response to concerns about how the creation and use of computerized databases might impact individuals' privacy rights. It safeguards privacy through creating four procedural and substantive rights in one's own personal data.

1.

It requires government agencies to show an individual records that are kept on that individual.

2.

It requires agencies to follow certain principles, called "fair information practices," when gathering and handling personal data.

3.

It places restrictions on how agencies can share an individual's data with other people and agencies

4.

It lets individuals sue the government for violating the provisions of the Act.

Why was the Privacy Act enacted?

The Privacy Act was passed to address past abuses such as:

- Federal strong-arm tactics for data collection
- In the early 1970's, in events leading up to Watergate, Senator Eagleton (who had voiced mistrust/disapproval of the Nixon administration) had his medical history publicized.
- Growing impact of computer technologies and the potential for abuse.

With the abuses that took place during Watergate, and the growing use of computers to store information, Congress envisioned the damage that could occur to personal privacy in a computer-based society. This realization led to the creation of the Privacy Act.

What are the limitations of the Privacy Act?

The Privacy Act applies only to:

US citizens
or Lawfully admitted aliens

Whose records are filed in a “System of Records” where those records

How will I know if the data that I handle is Privacy Act protected data?

Privacy Act protected data should be marked:

- "For Official Use Only - Privacy Act of 1974";
or
- "For Official Use Only - Privacy Act Data"

Be aware that Privacy Act protected data may not always be marked as such. If you have questions about whether data is protected under the Privacy Act, contact MI Division or ask your supervisor.

Besides Privacy Act data, should I be concerned with other types of For Official Use Only (FOUO) data?

Yes! As an employee, you will come in contact with multiple types of records. Some may be marked as "FOUO." For data marked as FOUO, you must:

Properly safeguard it.

- Use it only for official government business.
- Share it only with those with an official need for access.
- If you create records containing FOUO data, mark them at the time of creation.

Not all records are marked with the FOUO legend. If the record is not marked as FOUO, you may still be required to safeguard it. Do not disclose any agency record to a third party except for official, authorized purposes.
